MONTHLY STOCK HIGHLIGHT

Edison International is an electric utility that operates in Southern California. Over the past 10 years Edison has exited almost all of its non-regulated generation businesses and now operates as close to a pure regulated entity. There are two reasons why we expect that Edison will earn higher excess returns than other US regulated utilities; firstly Edison has one of the largest FERC regulated transmission asset bases which allows for higher allowed returns and less volatility in rates. Secondly, California has some of the most ambitious state level renewable energy and carbon reduction targets. Achieving these targets will require continued integration of renewables into the grid as well as investment in transmission and storage assets to balance supply and demand. Providing solutions to these issues will support both rate base growth at Edison and allow the company to contribute to meeting important social and climate targets.
