PORTFOLIO POSITIONING & MACRO OUTLOOK

At the end of the month the ATLAS portfolio was 92% invested. The portfolio has a slight positive exposure to GDP, a more hedged position to CPI and long bonds compared with the investment universe. During the month we sold Union Pacific and Bought Ausnet Services which resulted in a reduction in the portfolio GDP exposure and an increase to the inflation and interest rate hedge. The trade has also reduced the portfolio exposure to recession or stagflation risk as measured by our scenario analysis.

MONTHLY STOCK HIGHLIGHT

Norfolk Southern is one of the six major class 1 rail companies in North America. It operates as an effective duopoly in East and Central United States. The ATLAS investment thesis for the US rail companies is that the companies have a number of long term structural sources of incremental returns, especially in the intermodal segment where volumes and prices would benefit from a combination of economic growth, limitations on trucking capacity and the long term policy pressure to shift freight from road to rail to reduce energy usage and emissions. ATLAS analysis also showed that the impact of falling coal demand would be manageable without impairing shareholder returns. Norfolk Southern has undertaken a large investment program to increase capacity and service quality for intermodal which we believe will support volume and margin growth in the future.
