MONTHLY STOCK HIGHLIGHT

Fraport is the owner and operator of Frankfurt Airport in Germany as well as a portfolio of global airport holdings. Frankfurt Airport is the largest hub for Lufthansa in Europe and the 4th busiest airport in Europe. Frankfurt has recently added a third parallel runway and therefore has substantial growth capacity compared with many other European airports. The airport has been undergoing a large redevelopment of both existing terminals and the creation of a new terminal to serve increasing demand as well as to improve the security experience and retail service offering to passengers. ATLAS expects that Frankfurt will improve returns through modest overall growth supported by increasing operational efficiencies and improved retail services to clients. Fraport has been active in acquiring airports internationally, recently acquiring the Greek Island airport group. Fraport management expects that it can materially improve airside operations, passenger growth and retail spending in the group due to its knowledge of airport operations internationally.
